Raw material supply chain solution for international food company

An international food company needed a logistics plan to take its manufacturing process from raw materials to finished products. Our raw-material supply chain solution saw it through from start to finish. We brought in approximately 1,800 imported, customs-cleared containers of raw material from Port Qasim to a new distribution center in Karachi. Then, we used 50-foot, 3-axle trucks to transport materials from Kabirwala and Sheikhpura to Karachi; the same trucks shuttled interplant goods. We stored materials up to 4,000 dry pallet spots at Mehran Logistics Center and 1,000 temperature-controlled pallet spots at Qasim Logistics Center. Then, we transported raw material to the company's factories located more than 1,000 kilometers away in Kabirwala and Sheikhpura. Finally, we transported finished goods to the company's distributors.

Pharma giant trusts Agility for its first outsourced warehousing operation

Many pharmaceutical companies, including a division of a global healthcare company, manage their own warehousing because of strict QHSE compliance issues. The challenge for Agility's pharmaceutical customer was to find a trustworthy outsourcing partner to offer state-of-the-art warehousing services for its temperature-sensitive drug products. Agility was the first logistics firm to convince a pharmaceutical company in Pakistan to completely outsource its warehousing. We were actually competing against the company's own warehousing operations, and Agility had to make a business case that was attractive enough to convince them to outsource. Our QHSE compliant, temperature-controlled warehousing came at a cost on par with their current operations. As a result, Agility won the business.
